Subject: Previous CASSP listserv closes, new one opens

We thank all of you who joined the California Archaeological Site Stewardship Program (CASSP) events listserv. For more than ten years, we have used this listserv to send e-mails about CASSP events and other site stewardship activities. It was an easy and quick way to maintain contact with over 200 people who help preserve archaeological and historical sites in California. This month, we are making two important changes to the CASSP listserv.

1. Close the previous listserv and open a new one.

Currently, we are using Yahoo Groups to deliver this message to you. But Yahoo Groups will close on December 15, 2020. You can find more information about their decision by visiting Yahoo at <https://help.yahoo.com/kb/groups/SLN35505.html?impressions=true>

We recently created a replacement at Google Groups called, "California Archaeological Site Stewardship Program". It provides us with the same ability to contact by e-mail many people at once about CASSP events. If you want to continue to receive our e-mail messages, then please join this new group. Like the previous group, there is no fee to join our new Google Group.

Starting this week, we will use the new Google Group to send you an e-mail invitation to join the new listserv mailing list. The e-mail address that I use as manager of the new group is chris.padon@gmail.com. If you do not wish to click on the link that is sent in this invitation, then you can visit the groups.google.com website and follow the directions for joining a group. One of the steps requires that you search for "California Archaeological Site Stewardship Program".

2. Alternative ways to view the messages.

All of the messages that we send by e-mail through the new CASSP group will be available to everyone, whether they join or not. You can view messages by visiting the California Archaeological Site Stewardship Program group at groups.google.com, or by visiting the CASSP website as www.cassp.org. We will start this week by posting this message.

Thank you for your interest and participation in stewardship for archeological and historical sites in California. We look forward to seeing you at a CASSP event when it's safe to start scheduling them again.

Sincerely,
Chris and Beth Padon
